

exit()

The `exit()` function causes normal process termination and the least significant byte of "status" is returned to the parent.

```
#include <stdlib.h>
```

```
// "status" is the exit status code. Typically, "0" indicates success
[[noreturn]] void exit(int status);
```